Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Saturday 29 May 2021

UK Outlook for Thursday 3 Jun 2021 to Saturday 12 Jun 2021:
Whilst there is still likely to be a good deal of widespread dry weather for the start of this period, showers, which could be heavy and possibly thundery, and prolonged spells of rain are likely for a time, particularly in central and southern areas of the country. Temperatures most likely remaining around or above average at this time. Towards the end of the period, there is a signal towards a more general cooling trend, back towards more average temperatures. Widespread fine and dry conditions are likely to persist, but also is the continued risk of showers; these unsettled conditions become most likely in the north and northwest of the country, with southeastern areas seeing more settled conditions.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.